

Connexion Technologies Partners with Laguna Woods Village

Technology company to manage network for Laguna Woods Village's more than 12,000 residents.

Cary, North Carolina, Jan. 13, 2010 – Connexion Technologies today announced its partnership with Laguna Woods Village, a large Southern California retirement community. Connexion will now manage The Village's telecommunications network for the delivery of services such as television, high-speed Internet and telephone for its residents.

The arrangement between Laguna Woods Village and Connexion will reduce The Village's operating and capital expenses associated with the network, which will translate into substantial savings for the residents without reductions in service.

Under the new agreement, Connexion will manage all of the network's service providers, including West Coast Internet. These providers will continue to offer the current array of digital services at present rates. In addition, Connexion's providers are planning on adding 20 HD Channels in the first year of operation and adding 20 more in the second year of operation.

"We see a great deal of potential in the relationship between Laguna Woods Village and Connexion Technologies," said Russell Ridgeway, Director of Broadband Operations. "Connexion's management of our networks will greatly reduce operating expenses and enable us to provide an enhanced offering to our residents."

Connexion will spend in excess of one million dollars to upgrade the cable operation at no cost to Laguna Woods Village. This will allow for additional programming: more HD channels, pay per view movies and events and other new services: discounted residential telephone service and new high-speed Internet products.
